homemade outfit of pole, string, and earthworms, and catch my share of perch. Even before that, I watched as the men harvested shad from the Chickahominy River down in the Tidewater. Later I gave the Rappahannock a try. Last real attempt I made to go fishing was at Nags Head, N. C. Mother Brightleaf and I arose at 5 A. M. and shortly thereafter were at the home of the "captain" who was supposed to take us fishing. But the "captain" shook his head, and said a polite "no." He added that "the wind ain't right, and you wouldn't catch anything!" We had the same experience at Panama City. Proves that there really are "honest fishermen." Last week we saw a gosh-awful lot of fishing going on along Florida's West Coast. The Indian Rocks Fishing Pier on the Gulf of Mexico opposite St. Petersburg is a top attraction. This pier, largest in Florida, extends out 1,041 feet into the Gulf. It is in business 24 hours around the clock. Rates are amazingly low. A husband and wife can fish for a full week for only $6.00, or $12 for a month. Typical fish caught are mackerel, king fish, grouper, jacks, tarpon, sea trout, barracuda, drum, snook, red fish, cobia, croaker, blues, pompano, yellowtail and sea bass. You don't have to be an expert, and you can rent necessary gear. Bait is cheap. Those who prefer live bait use pinfish, sand fleas, crab, shrimp and minnows. Frozen bait includes squid, mullet, shrimp and minnows. This pier also offers a cleaning and storage service.

I have it here in my notes to say something nice about the delightful gentleman I met at Silver Springs, Florida. My three ladies were on the famous boat cruise down the fabulous Silver River, from whose springs 550,000,000 gallons of water pour forth each and every 24 hours. But I had taken the cruise before and so I just browsed about. I did several things in that hour. First, I met a charming gentleman from the advertising department of The Milwaukee Journal, surely one of the very top newspapers of the nation. Then I met a gracious gentleman and his wife who were retired after a successful career as wholesale floriats in Kansas City, Mo. They fascinated me and I spent nearly half-an-hour chatting with them about flowers and such. But then, short of chance acquaintances, I ended up in a portrait studio, where an artist drew a 12-by-18 inch picture of what he seemed to think I looked like, for the sum of $3.00. I am no judge of artistry, but I have placed the drawing on my "museum" walls.

Oh yes, I am long-winded today. The typewriter keys are nimble, and we live in a nimble age. Let it roll! Take, for example, I awake at 8 A. M. at Miami Beach in a delightful motor court, right alongside the waves. And so, I pull out the telephone directory, and I find that in Miami there are some 410 "Robinsons" listed! There is listed a "Mrs. C. H. Robinson" on Devonshire Blvd. Often I have been in a big city and had occasion to go over the list of "Robinsons" in the phone book. And often when I find one listed with my initials, I am tempted to call them and ask: "Is this the 'C. H. Robinson' residence?" and when they say "yes," to comment: "This is C. H. Robinson." But I never have done this, and probably never will. It would be about like my friend, Mac Crockett in Richmond. People call his home and ask: "Is Davy Crockett in?" There are lots of people in America, and always I find it a sure bet, if you awaken in the middle of the night, to study the phone book, and chances are you will fall asleep again before you get through those with your own name!

And another thing about telephone directories. The trend now is overwhelmingly toward having some name as a guide in dialing. You call Edgewood, Circle, Plaza, Jackson, and such, and they, a series of numbers. Well, in Florida I noted that one of the call words was TU, and I looked to the front of the directory to see what that was. It turned out to be TUXEDO! Well! I got to turning that around in my feeble mind, and the word "Tuxedo" fetched back fond memories. It seems to me that the Tuxedo business is on the downgrade, and it is nice that some telephone people are reviving the mere name of Tuxedo. I recall the time when most every man who had any social activity, had to own a Tuxedo. And that included the shirt shirt, shirt studs, black tie, and patent leather shoes, etc. When I came along, the era of the long-tail formals was waning, and the Tuxedo was accepted. But even that has faded away. The ladies like to have at least one or two evening gowns for "formal" occasions, but the men show up in their one and only "Sunday suit." Someday, maybe the formal dress will return. Take the humblest citizen and rig him up in formal gear, and he feels like "The Kingfish."

Why You Should Do Business In Appomattox During 1960

LISTED BELOW ARE SOME OF THE REASONS WHY WE INVITE YOU TO DO BUSINESS IN APPOMATTOX DURING 1960.

FIRST, we think local firms merit your trade on a pure competitive basis. Local stores carry the same national brand names of merchandise as large city stores, or mail order houses. Local prices are in line. Many nationally known brands are fair trade items, and sell at the same price everywhere. When you buy locally, you can see the product before you decide . . . . you save postage, money order and other costs . . . . plus the very considerable item of loss of time, travel to the city and wear and tear on car and patience. So . . . from the sheer angle of competition, you can do better right at home.

SECOND, have you ever stopped to consider what local business contributes to the operative costs of your community . . . local taxes which build civic improvements and maintain costs of local government. In addition to the usual property taxes your home businessman pays a number of local licenses and taxes and his contributions help keep public services going.

THIRD, the people employed by home town business places are important in the economic life of the community. Their pay checks are a big factor around town. Local industry thrives on local suppert. Local labor and local business are a team to generate local prosperity. You help provide local jobs for your neighbors when you support local business.

FOURTH, when you spend your money away from home, you help some other town grow. That is all very well, for we have nothing but the kindest feeling to every town and city in all America and we are happy to see any one of them prosper. But there is a responsibility of local government and local institutions such as schools, churches, etc., that many of us feel should be borne locally. The only way that can be done in the American tradition, is for local people to solve their own problems and work together for their community good.

FIFTH, the local business man is your neighbor and knows your needs. You can talk things over with your local banker, your local building dealer, your local hardware man, your local automotive dealer, your local timber dealer, your local telephone man, your local furniture dealer, your local farm supply dealer, etc. . . knowing that they have made a study of your needs and can give you sound counsel. Have you ever tried writing a distant firm to send a man down to advise you about cutting some timber on your property . . . to endorse your note or tell you how to get the crabgrass out of your lawn? Local business men cheerfully render service in their lines and want you to look upon their clerks, managers and owners as friends

SIXTH, Appomattox is a growing town because so many have found it profitable to trade here . . . to provide local jobs and maintain community life. We invite you to join the trend! Do Business in Appomattox in 1960.
